MUSEUM STUDIES - 2015

Museum Studies is an inter-disciplinary field of study that encompasses museum history, theory and practice. The course develops a critical awareness of the social, cultural and political issues facing those working in museums, art galleries and related heritage and collecting institutions; whilst delivering the knowledge and skills required for professional practice. Situated in close proximity to Brisbane’s world-class museums and collections, UQ provides a uniquely stimulating environment for museological research and training.

An inter-disciplinary approach is used to deliver core courses through the School of Social Science with a broad choice of inter-departmental and cross-faculty electives. Participants are able to choose from elective courses including Anthropology, Art History, Applied History, Classics, Event Management, Interpretation and Visitor Research, Professional Writing, and Science Communication.

Students taking the UQ Museum Studies will have the opportunity to work with the campus based museums and galleries – including the UQ Art Museum, UQ Anthropology Museum and the R.D. Milns Antiquities Museum. The program has also close partnerships with leading Queensland museums, art galleries and heritage institutions including the Queensland Museum, Queensland Art Gallery / Gallery of Modern Art, the Museum of Brisbane, the Rail Workshops Museum in Ipswich, Cobb and Co Museum in Toowoomba, Queensland State Library, Queensland Police Museum, Queensland Centre for Photography, as well as other collecting institutions.

We offer a Graduate Certificate, Graduate Diploma and Masters of Museum Studies. This suite of programs provides qualifications for graduates who are currently working or seeking to work in the museum industry nationally and internationally.
