

CRIMINOLOGY – 2017

Issues of crime and criminal justice are of central importance for contemporary social and political life. Criminology at UQ provides a comprehensive exploration of the area from the sociological perspective. This means that crime and responses to crime, such as policing and the law, are understood to be shaped by social values, institutions and processes. In undertaking Criminology at UQ, students will develop an understanding of the patterns and causes of criminality and the operations of the criminal justice system in dealing with this activity. They will also be equipped with the theoretical and methodological skills needed to collect, interpret and evaluate information about crime and criminal justice. Criminology is suitable for all students looking to gain insight into contemporary society, and it will particularly appeal to students interested in careers in policing, private security and corrective services and in social policy areas related to criminal justice. Students undertaking combined Arts/Law degrees have also found the program particularly useful.

Criminology can be studied as:

- single and extended majors in the Bachelor of Arts or a major in the Diploma in Arts
- Bachelor of Criminology and Criminal Justice (Honours)
- electives as part of the Bachelor of Social Science, or another degree program offered by UQ

Requirements for majors

Please note that a course can only count towards ONE major within the program. Students should declare their chosen major/s via mySI-net by their third year.

The course list, along with program rules and requirements for the Bachelor of Arts can be accessed via Courses and Programs: <http://www.uq.edu.au/study>.

Honours

Honours can be undertaken as a fourth year of study following completion of the Bachelor of Arts. Honours provides students with skills that are highly sought after by employers, particularly in advanced training in research design and methods, experience in conducting independent research and advanced communication skills. Students who do very well during their honours year may be eligible to go onto a research higher degree (Master or PhD).
