

HERITAGE MANAGEMENT- 2017

Heritage Management has developed into a major area of global scholarship, government regulation and industrial consultancy in recent decades. Embedded in a world heritage framework, this program will provide graduates from archaeology, anthropology, history and cognate disciplines in planning and environmental management with "employer-ready" skills, meeting national expectations for transition into, or professional development within the heritage industry.

Taking advantage of UQ's existing strong expertise in research and consulting across the heritage spectrum - including our in-house consultancy unit UQCHU, the program will focus on developing professional management skills and knowledge of the legal frameworks, processes and practices utilised in managing heritage places such as archaeological sites, landscapes, places of spiritual, and other cultural significance, and heritage buildings. Ethically focused and drawing on perspectives from archaeology, anthropology, history and other cognate disciplines, students will put their knowledge into practice in field and classroom settings.

We offer a Graduate Certificate, a Masters (#16) which can be an option for students who have completed honours in a cognate discipline, and a Masters (#24) which can be an option for students who have completed a bachelor degree in a cognate discipline.
